

Jamie McVicar

Following a 20 year career as a communications engineer and CIS analyst with the MoD and NATO, serving throughout the UK, Germany, Netherlands and Norway, Jamie went back to school and retrained as a Secondary Music teacher.

In addition to his day job, first as teacher of music in Campbeltown Grammar School, then as Assistant Director of Music at Scotland's oldest boarding school, Loretto School near Edinburgh, Jamie also led a number of youth bands to great success in National competitions, and performed at Championship level on euphonium.

In 2014 Jamie moved to Episkopi, with his wife and two children (Iona, aged 16 and Archie, aged 14), in order to take up the post of Brass Teacher with the Cyprus Music Service. The whole family plays brass instruments, and is very active in the musical life of BFC, through Cyprus Music Service, the RAF Akrotiri Voluntary Band and the newly-formed Cyprus Brass Band, for both of which Jamie is Musical Director.
